CRPUSD needs hands-on leader

By Lanny Lowery

All signs pointed to the announcement of a new superintendent for Cotati-Rohnert Park Unified School District to happen at the June 11 trustee meeting. While this did not occur, causing much speculation in the community, the process searching for the new superintendent, allows for more time to ensure that the new leader fits the district's needs.

The agenda for the "Regular Meeting of the Board of Trustees" listed a most dramatic moment. Item 5A lifts the curtain a few inches from the floor: "Approval of the Employment Agreement for District Superintendent." The board meeting should have been crowded with principals, teachers and community members anticipating the introduction of the school district's next leader. In reality, on that 100+ degree June evening, more PG&E employees than educators populated the board meeting room, a strong suggestion that something was amiss.

The agenda, released Fri., June 7, gave some clues as it told about a trip made by three board members to Temecula Valley Unified School District on May 16. From that point it was not difficult to determine whom this prospective superintendent was. A few hours' computer search reading news articles told the story. A couple of phone calls to Temecula Valley and to other educational contacts (CRPUSD' see page 12

New fire station gets final direction

Construction on Rohnert Park's Westside Fire Station is proceeding on schedule, according to an update by staff at the city's last council meeting on the evening of Tues., June 11th.

Oct. of 2017, houses, apartments and even motor homes are at a premium. After watching a granny unit being built down the street, the curiosity of restrictions came to mind.

The City of Cotati has no restrictions. Many homeowners are looking to make good use of the unused space near the primary dwelling. Many properties in Cotati are zoned to add granny flats in backyard spaces which provides homeowners to have a chance to become a micro real estate developer.

Cotati has six requirements for building a granny flat.

For detached ADUs, the total floor area of the unit shall not be over 1,200 square feet. No maximum floor area for conversions or existing space is established. The minimum floor area for an ADU is 150 square feet again by Ca. state standards and the maximum floor area is 500 square feet strictions are not specified under state standards.

Under state law, the city must approve or deny any permit application in 120 days or less.

The timeline to finish a granny flat design, permit and new construction or remodel project is typically more than 12 months. Again go to the City of Cotati, check with the city's zoning department and learn more about the requirements in Cotati.

was slated for low-density industrial with some light commercial tossed in. But times change and over the past couple decades the city's council has taken a more accepting outlook towards new residential developments.

Of course, more people means more services, and when Rohnert Park approved its Twenty Year General Plan back at the turn of the millennium, they slated a bit of property along Labath Ave. and the Hinebaugh Creek as a potential site for the city's third fire station. Nothing happened for a while, but in 2017 the city finally decided to pull the trigger. They appropriated $5.6 million and sent the project out for public bid.

Cotati fills Planning Commission

By Joshua Farestveit-Moore

It was nothing but smiles and applause as the Cotati City Council appointed its newest member to the city's planning commission at its Tues., June 11 meeting.

Her name's Brittany Mckanny and she's new to town, relatively speaking. It's only been a year and a half since Mckanny, her husband and their seven-month old infant moved to the city from Santa Rosa, but already she's certain that Cotati is where she wants to put down roots, as it were.

Why? Well, the reason is quite simple: she likes the small town feel.

"We knew about Cotati but never really understood the uniqueness of the community. Since we've been here we've fallen in love. It's a wonderful place that we are absolutely committed to raising our son in," Mckanny said. "The walkability, the people, the fact that my neighbors say hello—we feel like we're a part of this place. It's incredible '

It all started a couple weeks back when Mckanny attended a planning commission meeting with an eye towards getting more involved in her community. Right time right place, because it was

There was a nice turnout for the opening night of the Cotati Farmers' Market in La Plaza Park last Thursday. People ate, drank, listened to live music, bought produce, and took advantage of free chair massages. Children played games and enjoyed two jump houses, pony rides, hanging out with chickens and a bunny along the playground equipment that is part of the park.

By Stephanie Derammelaere

Both the Cotati and Rohnert Park farmers' markets kicked off last week, Rohnert Park celebrating its 10th year anniversary and Cotati revamping their market to bring in more vendors and engage the community. Much more than just a place to pick up some produce, both markets aim to make a family's weekly trip to the market a fun activity that pleases both young and old alike, with music, games, activities and great food.

A major addition to the Cotati farmers' market this year is the partnership with Farmster, the organization managing the Veronda-Falletti Ranch in Cotati.

"Farmster is really excited to be a part of the community and join up with the farmers' market," says Kelly Smith, Executive Director of Agricultural Community Events Farmers' Markets, which manages both the Cotati and Rohnert Park farmers' markets. "They plan on bringing their farm goods including eggs, potentially meat from some of the animals and vegetables they're planning on growing for the market.'

Farmster also plans on introducing fun games for all ages that will vary from week to week such as corn hole and squash bowling.

Along with the old favorites such as vegetables from Ortiz Family Farm and fruit from Neufeld Farms, there are also be several new vendors such as Waxing Moon offering micro greens from Sebastopol and Chay's Organic Farm offering strawberries and vegetables. This year there are also several new hot food vendors such as Mountain Mike's pizza and Cotatibased Great Savor, offering comfort food that is fresh and sourced locally. Some new packaged food item vendors include Flavor Fiesta offering Boba teas, Juice House Company selling detoxifying juices and Rainy Day Chocolates to satisfy every sweet tooth.

Robert Grant

"The Cotati Chamber of Commerce will sell beer and wine and they'll also have a rotating business booth for local businesses who are members of the chamber," says Smith. "It's a great way for businesses to engage in the community and also be a part of the farmers market without the full season commitment.'

To ensure that all ages of family members are engaged, the Cotati market will again have Victoria's Fashion Stables offering pony rides and a petting zoo and a new vendor, Party Jumps, will offer jumpy houses.

'It's great because the kids love it and it's a great way for the parents to have a moment to look around the market while still being able to see their child," says Smith. "You can have a moment to visit the booths and have an adult conversation while your kids are having fun in the jumpy house. It's a win-win for the families."

She was an instructor, for over thirty years, first as a classroom teacher and later as an administrator. She would cut many things for the classroom and her silhouettes always resembled something other than what she had in mind. But then she started making papier-mâché objects and it has been her passion ever since. Van Nuys says, "Regardless of how many bowls I make, no two are ever alike." Showing her samples from start to finish was a rare treat. How someone could make a bowl that looks as if it is a beaten copper or brass bowl, is way beyond my comprehension. Elizabeth is married to David Van Nuys, has four children and a very proud grandmother of six. Kira Van Nuys-Martin lives in Cotati with her husband and three children, Jonathan Van Nuys lives in San Francisco, Matthew Van Nuys lives in New York City with his wife and one child and Christopher Van Nuys, a recent graduate of the Empire Law School, lives in Cotati with his wife and two children. All the pieces in place

By Mickey Zeldes

I rescued a dog today. Not on the job, which you would expect, but in my neighborhood off hours. It wasn't a life-saving or cliffhanging rescue. I just returned a stray pup home. It took less than five minutes but it was satisfying. And this story isn't to pat myself on the back but to show how many pieces had to be in place for this to happen.

I was out for my power walk (sans my own dog since he can't keep up anymore now that he's a tripod) and headed to the path that runs along a park across from my neighborhood. Lots of people bike, jog or walk that path and many have dogs. I saw a tan dog running loose on the neighborhood side and a woman walking across the street to her car. I often see rude dog owners who allow their dog to run loose (even though it's a leash only area) and pay no attention to what their dog is doing that I was not surprised when she just got in her car and looked at her phone. So I asked her "is that your dog?" Surprisingly she responded "no, but I think it came out of that yard.'

Sure enough the dog was standing by a fence with a loose board and a white dog was poking his head out. It was as if the tan dog was encouraging her friend to join her in her escape. Would have been a cute video if I had thought of it! Seeing the problem I walked over towards the dog who turned to me and wagged her tail and then sat submissively as I approached. That's the first piece in place. The dog wasn't fearful, didn't play "catch me" and was actually very friendly.

The second piece was that she had on a collar with an ID tag. Clearly written was her name "Kiwi," her address and a phone number. So helpful!! Microchips are fabulous and a necessity but they don't help a good Samaritan out on the street. Anyways, it turns out that the house with the loose board was her home and I went up to the porch to see if anyone was home. That's the next piece that worked. A gentleman opened the door and was appropriately surprised to see his dog sitting on the porch with me. How often do we not get involved because you never know the reaction you might get from the other person? There are many angry people out there quick to assume the worse and accuse you, or some mysterious other person, of trying to steal their dog and purposely breaking the fence, etc.

So backing up, I guess the first piece was that I was willing to get involved. The other woman knew the dog was loose and even thought she knew which house the dog came from but she just got in her car and left. It's true a lot of irresponsible dog parents just open the door and allow their dogs to roam free, especially if they are near a field or park and assume they will come safely home when they are ready. No need to consider the havoc a loose dog can create for others! It also raises the question of what you would do if no one was home. Do you put the dog in the yard and try to secure it with a rock or something? Do you call animal control and wait for an officer to respond (do you have the time to do that?) Do you take the dog home and call the number and maybe hold onto the dog until the owner comes home from work? Or do you think, "well I tried" and leave the dog loose? Getting involved doesn't always turn out to be a quick, easy thing!

Fortunately, this man was grateful that I rang his doorbell. I took him to the side of his house to show him the loose board (with his other dog still poking his head through) and he appreciated that I took the time to do that. It was an easy thing to do in this situation and it all turned out for the best. It was clearly a good use of five minutes of my day and I'm happy that I helped. I was clearly lucky that all the pieces were in place. Would you have done the same?

Insurers keep going after dialysis patients Obey fireworks rules

The relief California's 66,000 kidney dialysis patients felt last fall after two serious threats to their survival were beaten back has turned out to be short-lived.

Not only are labor unions contemplating a second attempt to pass something like last year's failed Proposition 8, but there's also an attempt to revive a legislative proposal that could throw thousands of patients who require dialysis to stay alive off the expensive treatment.

Because labor interests like the Service Employees International Union, which sponsored Proposition 8, lost by a solid 62-38 percent margin last year, that possible revival looks like the less threatening of this dangerous pair.

Proposition 8 aimed to put more union workers in hundreds of dialysis clinics, where patients with end-stage kidney disease sit for at least three hours, three times a week while their blood runs through filtering machines that cleanse it of toxins normally removed by healthy kidneys. It would have forced closure of an unknown number of clinics by demanding they withhold payment from key workers and officials.

(Full disclosure: The writer underwent six months of dialysis before receiving a kidney transplant.)

The other threat last year came from a legislative bill carried by Democratic state Sen. Connie Leyva of San Bernardino County. Her measure could have thrown dialysis patients off their health insurance plans if they accept third-party aid in paying premiums.

For some dialysis patients, such aid is critically important. Many are so exhausted and weakened by the constant blood interchanges they endure that they cannot work, living on fixed disability payments and other forms of welfare. Premium assistance can be the means for staying alive.

But Leyva's bill, known as SB1156, quickly moved through several legislative committees, eventually passing handily in part due to support from unions that saw it as somewhat similar in impact to their ballot initiative, which eventually failed. Fortunately for dialysis patients, then-Gov. Jerry Brown vetoed that bill.

But it is back, a near clone sponsored this time by Democratic Assemblyman Jim Wood of Healdsburg, whose district includes much of the state's North Coast. It would require organizations providing charitable financial aid to dialysis patients to disclose their identities to insurance companies. This bill is part of a national effort by insurers to force such patients off their books and onto public coverage like Medi-Cal. Essentially, the insurance companies seek to transfer their expense to taxpayers Dialysis does cost a lot, often running more than $6,000 per month and sometimes above $50,000. So the new measure can have two major effects: Limiting some people's ability to get dialysis and increasing insurance company profits.

No one yet knows how Wood's new bill, known this time as AB 290, will eventually fare. But there are few new faces in the Legislature, and there's little new about the identity of their financial backers. Which will likely place the fate of thousands of dialysis patients in the hands of Gov. Gavin Newsom, who has said nothing about this bill.

There are ironies here. One comes in the brief bio posted on Woods' official website, where the longtime dentist brags that he's "been successful in passing legislation to protect and expand (access to) medical, dental and mental health care...

His new bill would have the opposite effect. Because it allows insurance companies to reimburse dialysis clinics at rates below the cost of providing care, some clinics might close or refuse care to patients with premium assistance.

Many of those patients are helped now by the American Kidney Fund (ÅKF), financed in part by large dialysis companies that run the majority of California clinics. The AKF gives premium help to about 74,000 dialysis patients in all 50 states, including almost 4.000 in California.

It called last year's SB 1156 "a thinly veiled attempt by insurers to prevent kidney patients from being able to choose their own insurance plan, if they accept charitable premium assistance.'

The AKF claimed that bill aimed to let insurance companies rid themselves of "sicker and more costly patients."

So at least some dialysis patients are once again back on notice that their needed care might not last long. That's not a good thing for folks whose health is already seriously compromised.

For the past two months Home Depot manager Tim Grace and his crew of 163 employees have been stocking inventory and setting up displays in preparation of opening day Thursday. Home Depot, located at the north end of Redwood Drive by Wal-Mart, is the fourth in a series of large discount stores on Rohnert Park's west side and its opening follows the opening of Price Club, Food 4 Less and Wal-Mart. On Wednesday afternoon at 2 p.m. the warehouse store will open its doors during a ribbon-cutting ceremony. "That's the sneak preview for our construction customers,' said Grace, "but everybody who walks in the door will be welcome.' Home Depot is a warehouse type of store that caters to the do-it-yourself homeowner and professionals in the building industry. Within the next few months that shopping center will also see the opening of an International House of Pancakes and Chili's Mexican restaurant as well as a 40,000square foot Home Express furniture store by Wal-Mart. On Monday, with two days left before the grand opening. employees were still involved in major projects, such as stocking the two-story-high shelves, as well as taking care of details. "Everything is falling right into place," said Grace, "It's a fast pace now and it will be a pace when we open the doors." Grace and his crew moved into the building in the middle of May. "There was nothing here, we came into an empty shell." He said. Inside the 102,000 square-foot building are rows and rows of merchandise, stacked to the ceiling. "You want faucets? We've got faucets," said Grace. Another part of the store provides a selection of hand and power tools. Near-by he showed off an aisle that boasted a variety of all sizes and designs. He went on to show a nursery with vegetation popular for landscaping.

Light fireworks on stable, hard, flat, surfaces that are 25-40 feet from flammable items and spectators.

Never put your head or any part of your body over a firework. Never look into a tube to inspect a firework. Never hold a lit firework in your hand.

Don't attempt to re-light a "dud." If a firework fails to ignite, let stand for at least 5 minutes, then immerse in water.

Keep a bucket of water, a water hose and/or a fire extinguisher nearby for emergencies. Always be prepared to respond to a mishap.

Store fireworks in a cool, dry place and not in a pocket. Move animals inside and away from displays – the noise and lights of fireworks often frighten animals.

Don't purchase or possess illegal fireworks. They are against the law, unpredictable, and dangerous.

Illegal fireworks are identified as anything that explodes, flies, or launches into the air. Stationary devices are generally considered "safe and sane." If you choose to purchase safe and sane fireworks, purchase them from local non-profits to be certain they are legal. If you are in possession of illegal fireworks or they are on your property, you will be fined $1,000. It is important to note that safe and sane fireworks may only be used within city limits on July 2-4.

Rohnert Park Department of Public Safety is excited to announce that residents now have a new tool to help combat illegal fireworks. The tool is an App called "Nail 'em" and will serve as an aid in the city's zero tolerance approach. The App is a fireworkspecific reporting tool for anyone with a mobile device.

Easily report the possession, sale and/or use of illegal fireworks in our community along with photos and GPS location. The App is free of charge as a public service through TNT Fireworks. It is available through the Apple iTunes and Google Play stores for both the iPhone and Android platforms.

Complaints submitted through the App will automatically be routed to the correct law enforcement and/or fire personnel. You can opt-in to receive notifications and stay informed about the status of your complaint. Will you help keep our community safe by reporting illegal fireworks activity?

Consider these risks before calling the local funeral home: Anytime you pay for services in advance, you run the risk of not receiving what you paid for. A funeral home may go out of business or may not honor the arrangement for any number of reasons. Funeral homes are required to provide an upfront, detailed price list. Before prepaying, get a written contract that shows exactly what you're buying and make sure you (and your family) understand what is included. Finally, check your state's regulations to find out if you are protected if the funeral home goes out of business.

Be a fraud fighter! If you can spot a scam, you can stop a scam. Visit the AARP Fraud Watch Network at www.aarp.org/fraudwatchnetwork or call the AARP Fraud Watch Network Helpline at 1-877-908-3360 to report a scam or get help if you've fallen victim.

SUMMARY OF ORDINANCE NO. 934 OF THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF ROHNERT PARK AMENDING ROHNERT PARK MUNICIPAL CODE SECTIONS 6.14.010, 6.14.030, AND 9.62.10, AND ADDING NEW SECTION 9.62.050, TO IMPOSE PERMIT REQUIREMENTS FOR COMMERCIAL USES OF CITY PARKS AND RECREATIONAL FACILITIES, REGULATE OTHER NON-PUBLIC USES WITHIN PARKS, CHANGE COURT HOURS, AND MODIFY DOG RESTRAINT REQUIREMENTS FOR OBEDIENCE TRAINING CLASSES

Pursuant to Government Code Section 36933 (c), the following constitutes a summary of Ordinance No. 934 introduced by the Rohnert Park City Council on May 28, 2019, and adopted on June 11, 2019, at its meeting held in the City Council Chambers, 130 Avram Avenue, Rohnert Park, California.

This Ordinance revises Rohnert Park Municipal Code section 9.62.010, which prohibits certain activities in City parks. The Ordinance would authorize persons to modify landscaping features of parks only with written permission of the director of the community services department. The Ordinance would also require persons hosting events or activities with more than 10 people in a public park that are not open to the general public to first obtain written permission from the community services department. The Ordinance would also prohibit the use of sports courts and fields between 10:30 p.m. and 8:00 a.m. as well as after dark in locations where no permanent lighting is present.

The Ordinance requires a person to secure a vending permit from the director of the community services department before vending food and merchandise within City parks, and provides for issuance of administrative citations and civil fines under Chapter 1.25 of the Rohnert Park Municipal Code for vending in a City park without a vending permit. Under the Ordinance, sales of services and other non-vending commercial activities are prohibited in city parks without first obtaining a commercial use permit from the director of the community services department.

A new section 9.62.050 is added to the Rohnert Park Municipal Code to govern the issuance of vending permits and commercial use permits by the director of the community services department, and authorizes the director of the community services department to impose conditions on vending permits and commercial use permits. Persons engaging in charitable or sales for charitable purposes would be exempt from vending permit and commercial use permit requirements.

This Ordinance modifies Rohnert Park Municipal Code section 6.14.010 to exempt from dogs that are participating in obedience training class from citywide leash requirements. Rohnert Park Municipal Code section 9.62.010 and 6.14.030 are modified to exempt dogs from leash requirements in public parks provided that such dogs are in permitted obedience training class and within the area designated in the city-issued permit.

Lastly, the Ordinance also removes a prohibition on distributing handbills and other printed materials in city parks. This Ordinance also removes a prohibition on riotous or indecent conduct, as well as abusive, profane, or indecent language in city parks.

A certified copy of the full text of Ordinance is posted and available for review in the City Clerk's Office at 130 Avram Avenue, Rohnert Park, California. This ordinance shall be in full force and effective thirty (30) days after its adop tion, and shall be publish and posted as required by law. Cinnabar's "Barber" hilarious!

By Janet and Lanny Lowery "Figaro! Figaro! Figaro!"

Maybe all of what most of us have known about opera since childhood. This comes early in Cinnabar Theater's "The Barber of Seville." Now we must wait for two and a half hours for, as Yogi Berra may have so aptly coined the end of most productions, a baseball season or an opera, "It ain't over till the fat lady sings!'

No time for waiting for that lady in the Cinnabar production as the laughter does not cease. Verbal, vocal and physical humor singly, dually, or all combined happen from the opening curtain to the closing gag. And, as the person sitting left of me commented, "It's all performed in English!"

The age-old story of the secret suitor opposing the pantelone, the rich old lecher, for the love the young beautiful heiress, presents its complications through disguises and tricks and deceits. The predictable outcome leaves everyone smiling, the audience, the young couple, the old lecher and even Figaro the barber.

Cinnabar has outdone itself bringing not just this remarkable show to its venue but also so many widely known and highly talented performers to its stage. Sergio throughout the Bay Area for his though every other character performances, and cited by "Classical Voice" as singing with 'great charm and excellent vocal contribute to Vieira's incredible ability," plays the role of Lindoro, the helpless lover who depursuit of Rosina (Maya Kherani).

While "Opera News" declared Vieira as "show stealing," in this version of "The Barber of Seville" every character has his or her moment. The show opens with a comical vignette involving street musicians. And one scene seems to try to top the last. Berta, for example, makes the most with her opportunity to react with expressions, movement and voice to the appearance of the handsome young Lindoro.

This outstanding production with musical direction led by Mary Chun and stage direction by Cinnabar's own Elly Lichenstein with James Pelican is Krista Wigle as the servant charged with an eleven-person orchestra. "The Kids Show A" premiered Wed., Jun 5. The fun began with a few hundred parents and siblings lined up in Spreckels' lobby. Soon the theater filled with excitement of anticipation as family members, laden with flowers to present their own dancing stars, moved quickly to their seats. Then a little blonde girl wearing a shiny red dress walked boldly to center stage to introduce the show while asking the audience members to silence their cell phones.

"Hit the Road, Jack" like Ray Charles never performed it brought several more girls across the stage as they told the dancing boy wearing a black top and grey striped pants to "Hit the Road, Jack." Then, to slow down the pace, eight 7 to 9 year old girls in white tutus and black belts moved elegantly in a ballet piece called "A Million Dreams."

Variety continued as another seven to nine-year-old group of two boys and three girls wearing red vests, black backpacks hiphopped a skit titled "Passin' Notes." Next came some preteens and teens tapping to "Lips are Movin.'

A preteen contemporary, "Never Enough," brought fourteen girls moving in precision creating an image of a beautiful coral shell using long pink dresses and flowing moments of arms to add to the lovely effect.

Jazz and more hip-hop added to the lively assortment of dances.

The Musical Theatre broke up the dance sequences as thirteen preteens presented a skit from 'The Addams Family Musical."

101 Real Estate & Business

C^{The} C^{The} COICE Your financial co-pilot

Ken Weise

If anything happens to you, your family has someone to consult.

If you weren't around, what would happen to your investments? In many families, one person handles investment decisions and spouses or children have little comprehension of what happens each week, month, or year with a portfolio.

In an emergency, this lack of knowledge can become financially paralyzing. Just as small business owners risk problems by "keeping it all in their heads," families risk problems when only one person understands investments.

A trusted relationship with a financial professional can be so vital. If the primary individual handling investment and portfolio management responsibilities in a family passes away, the family has a professional to consult – not a stranger they have to explain their priorities to at length, but someone who has built a bond with mom or dad and perhaps their adult children.

You want a professional who has to meet a fiduciary standard. Look for a financial professional who upholds a fiduciary standard. Professionals who build their businesses on a fiduciary standard tend to work on a fee basis or entirely for fees. Other financial services industry professionals may earn much of their compensation from commissions linked to trades or product sales.

Commission-based financial professionals don't necessarily have to abide by a fiduciary standard. Sometimes, only a suitability standard must be met. The difference may seem minor, but it really isn't. The suitability standard, which hails back to the days of cold-calling stock brokers, dictates that you should recommend investments that are "suitable" to a client. In contrast, a financial professional working by a fiduciary standard always has an ethical requirement to act in a client's best interest and to recommend investments or products that clearly correspond to that best interest. The client comes first. You want a professional who looks out for you. Financial professionals earn trust through their character, ability and candor. In handling portfolios for myriad clients, they learn to watch for certain concerns and to be aware of certain issues that may get in the way of wealth building or wealth retention

Many investors have built impressive and varied portfolios, but lack long-term wealth management strategies. Money has been made, but little attention may have been given to tax efficiency or risk exposure.

As you near retirement age. playing defense becomes more and more important. A trusted financial professional could help you determine a risk and tax management approach with the potential to preserve your portfolio assets and your estate.

Your family will want nothing less. With a skilled financial professional around to act as a "co-pilot" for your portfolio, your loved ones will have someone to contact should the unexpected happen. When you have a professional who can step up for you, today and tomorrow, you have a financial professional whose service and guidance can potentially add value to your financial life.

If you're the family member in charge of investments and crucial financial matters, don't let that knowledge disappear at your passing. A will or a trust can transfer assets, but not the acumen by which they have been accumulated. A relationship with a trusted financial professional may help to convey it to others.

The loan process and what not to do

Scott Sheldon

When you're getting a mortgage the process can seem a little bit scary because it's unfamiliar and most people don't take out mortgages that often, so the unfamiliarity of the process can seem daunting. stressful and somewhat cryptic. Here is how the mortgage process works and most importantly what you should avoid doing when getting a loan...

In order to successfully procure mortgage financing, you must compile supporting finan cial documentation including but, not limited to, pay stubs, W-2s, bank statements, copies of insurance and complete an application with the lender of vour choice. From here most banks will create an application, send you disclosures and move your file into processing where they do some additional dotting of the i's and crossing of the t's. Next the processor will push your file over to underwriting. Make no mistake the underwriter's job is to deny your loan. Your loan will come out of underwriting either denied, suspended or approved with conditions. Very rarely do loans ever get denied, generally most loans get 'approved with conditions.

Approved with conditions means on a purchase you can generally release your loan contingency if the conditions are met which is based on the discretion of your mortgage professional. Approved with conditions means your closing will close provided you provide more supporting documentation. Here is what this might look like:

Provide a year-end pay stub with a breakdown of compensation.

Explain $4,200 cash deposit in savings account ending in 334.

Letter of explanation about why you're buying this property in relationship to the other property that you presently own.

Provide last page of K1 that you supply the bank that you're using for your mortgage with the above documentation your loan would be final approved clear to close and docs ordered to close escrow.

Let's say for example you provide all these things requested and upon the review of those items more conditions are added. It happens, but not often. Please understand mortgage companies are not trying to deny your loan and they're not trying to make life hard for you even though it might feel that way. The federal government says this is how you must do loans. It's not an option to simply ignore a bank statement or withhold documentation because when that transpires the loan could cause what's called a buy back in the secondary market and that lender could be on the hook for thousands and thousands of dollars. Mortgage underwriters can only ask for documents that are within mortgage loan guidelines. They can at times ask for documentation beyond that in quirky complex scenarios, but it is seldom. So, it's critical to work with a loan officer that knows the guidelines better than the underwriter. Finding such an individual is a rare find indeed.

The number one thing you want to make sure that you don't do when seeking a mortgage is go dark or non-responsive or be resistant to providing documents that the underwriter needs. You also want to avoid trying to supply another document in lieu of the document that the underwriter originally requested- 9 out of 10 times that does not work.

The simple answer is you must surrender. You must be willing to surrender and trust that the lender that you've hired to handle your home financing is going to perform for you even when it seems difficult and all odds are against you, have faith. Not all lenders and banks are created equal, but a willingness to stick it through to the end is worth it.

When the mortgage company asks for document the right answer is "ok."

- "I am too busy."
- "I will not provide that."

"Why?" "I have already provided this before. "I don't understand and will not provide until I understand.' All the above answers when a lender requests further documentation is the wrong approach especially if you are under a mortgage rate lock and timing is off the essence.

*Mortgage tip: Nearly all mortgages contain a time clock which is continually ticking, and you could be on the hook financially, by failing to provide the necessary documents the lender is requesting in the form increased fees for not closing escrow on time.

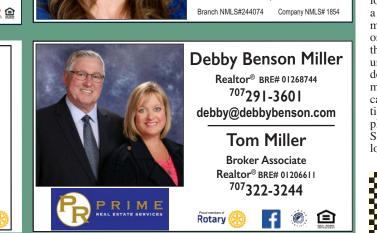

It's usually quicker, faster and easier for you and in your best interests financially to just get the piece of documentation that the lender needs rather than being resistant or uncooperative when they're only trying to do their job in helping you reach your financial goals.

Overcoming fears surrounding End-of-Life care

Julie Ann Soukoulis

Communicating about endof-life care and how to broach this topic with your aging parent or loved one can come up in simple everyday conversations. They could begin as simply as sharing coffee after a family funeral and your father says "I never want to be hooked up to ventilators like Uncle Steve was," or driving away from a nursing home visit and your mother says "I never want to end up in a place like that".

Statements such as these can give you a glimpse of what your loved one does or doesn't desire for their end-of-life care

What they don't provide you with, is the full picture you need to adequately plan ahead. The best plan of action is to have intentional conversations surrounding these concerns when you're not in crisis, before there's a reason to need such conversation. Fear #1 I don't want to die in a hospital or an institution like a nursing home. How to manage this: There are many options for the end of life outside of nursing homes and hospitals. Educate yourself on what these options are for yourself or your loved one. Look into homecare options with your loved ones, or investigate what an aging community with various levels of care would look like for them. Knowing your options and all involved in them ahead of time, will help when it's time to make a decision if /when change is necessary

Fear #2 I don't want to lose my independence.

How to manage this: In today's world there are so many devices & apps that offer opportunities to make a living at home as long as you can a viable option. Look into homecare options too so that your parent or loved one can stay living independently in their own home without feeling like they have to rely on family members to meet their daily care needs. Often home care might be a temporary solution while a senior is ill or recovering at home from an injury. A little bit a help early enough can ward off long-term struggles and keep your aging loved one living happier, safer, healthier and independently in their own home as long as they possibly can. As a home care provider myself, I always remind our clients - we are not here to take your independence from you, rather to help you maintain it.

Fear #3 What if I get Alzheimer's disease or dementia? How to manage this: Designating a loved one with POA (power of attorney) will give that person the power to advocate when they no longer can for themselves. Let them designate a trusted person in their life with this responsibility and it will give your loved one peace of mind- that their care wishes will be met regardless of their mental acuity.

Fear #4 I hate the thought of being on ventilators to keep me alive.

How to manage this: One of the best gift you can give yourself and your family is to establish a living will. Many attorneys will prepare a Living Will as part of an estate planning package. This investment is a gift to yourself and your loved ones as it outlines the treatment preferences in the event he or she is unable to make those decisions for him or herself. Here in California we have the POLST form (Physician orders for life-sustaining treatment). It is a medical order signed by both the patient and the physician that specifies the types of medical treatment a patient wishes to receive towards the end of life.

Culturally it's normal to feel anxious talking about death. Your parents may struggle to communicate clearly what their wishes are in advance of the end of life care. The best way to address it is to simply carve out time and be intentional with the conversation if the opportunity doesn't naturally present itself. The best conversation is where you get to ask questions to understand their wishes and reasoning behind their choices. Do be sure to record your dis cussion by taking notes so you have something to refer back to when making plans in the future. Having an open communication with your loved one will give everyone involved a sense of peace which will outweigh the anxiety leading up to the conversation.

The importance of immunization that are refusing vaccinations for themselves and their children. Vaccinations are safe and prevent life threatening diseases.

Over the last few years there have been outbreaks of measles and whooping cough with many deaths due to lack of universal vaccinations. Not long ago, these diseases were thought to be eradicated in the United States. But continual mass immunizations are necessary to control the spread of these highly contagious diseases through the population.

There are combinations of reasons why people don't get vaccinated, which include fear of shots, fear of side effects, fear of the government or corporate conspiracies and/or a belief in bad, disproved science. As a result, they, their children and others are placed at a greater risk for illness and possible death.

Last week, I talked with a young mother who was refusing vaccinations for herself and her infant because she did not like shots. I was taken aback. In 2010, there were 11 infant deaths from pertussis, better known as whooping cough, just in California alone. While researching on the Internet, I found heart-wrenching stories from parents who lost their children from their own lack of immunization. Please take the steps to receive vaccinations for you and your children.

Measles

Measles is a highly contagious viral disease. On May 30, federal health officials announced that there were more measles cases, 971, in the United States the first five months of 2019 then there were in all of 1992, when the last large outbreak in the U.S occurred. In Dec. 2014, a large outbreak of measles started in California when at least 40 people who visited or worked at Disneyland theme park in Orange County contracted measles; the outbreak also spread to at least half a dozen other states. This year's measles epidemic has involved 26 states. In 2000, measles was considered eradicated in the United States, but has recently made a startling come back. So it is crucial that everyone have the vaccine. With globalization, infectious diseases are only one plane ride away.

Since 1963, when the vaccine was introduced, cases and deaths from measles in the United States and other developed countries have plummeted. Prior to the vaccine, measles caused approximately 450 to 500 deaths each year in the United States. Between 1985 and 1992, death from measles was reported in approximately two out of every 1,000 U.S. measles cases, with pneumonia accounting for about 60 percent of these deaths, according to the CDC. The most recent measles death in the United States occurred in 2015. "Measles are preventable and the way to end this outbreak is to ensure that all children and adults who can get vaccinated, do get vaccinated," Dr. Robert Redfield, the director of the C.D.C Measles are widespread in many parts of the world, including Europe, Africa and Asia. Before widespread use of the vaccine, measles led to more than two million deaths a year, world-wide. Vaccination resulted in an 80 percent drop in worldwide measles deaths between 2000 and 2017. Around the globe, measles infections were responsible for 110,000 deaths in 2017, the most recent statistical year. Most of them were children under five. The overwhelming majority - more than 95 percent - of measles deaths occur in countries with low per capita incomes and weak health infrastructures, such as nations experiencing or recovering from a natural disaster or conflict. Disrupted health services, including routine vaccinations, along with overcrowding in residential camps increases the risk of infection.

Measles begin with a fever that lasts for a couple of days, followed by a cough, runny nose, conjunctivitis (pink eye) and a rash. The rash typically appears first on the face, along the hairline and behind the ears and then affects the rest of the body. Infected people are usually contagious from about four days before their rash starts to four days afterwards. Children routinely get their first dose of the MMR (measles, mumps, rubella) vaccine at 12 months old or later. The second dose of MMR is usually administered before the child begins kindergarten but may be given one month or more after the first dose.

Whooping cough

Pertussis, commonly known as whooping cough, is a highly contagious disease. Whooping cough is an infection of the respiratory system caused by the bacterium Bordetella pertussis. It is characterized by severe coughing spells that end in a "whooping' sound when the person breathes in.

The pertussis bacteria spreads from person to person through tiny drops of fluid from an infected person's nose or mouth. These drops may become airborne when the person sneezes, coughs, or laughs, infecting others when inhaled. Pertussis spreads even more readily by individuals touching their hands to their mouth or nose and then touching surfaces like a doorknob or a drinking glass. Others touch the same surfaces, getting the drops of bacteria filled fluid on their hands and then touch their own mouths or noses. Washing hands regularly helps prevent the spread of disease. Even better is a vaccination against pertussis.

The first symptoms of whooping cough are similar to those of a common cold, including runny nose, sneezing, mild cough and low-grade fever. After about one to two weeks, the dry, irritating cough evolves into coughing spells. Severe coughing continues for approximately two to four weeks, though the coughing spells can sometimes last even longer. The last stage consists of another several weeks of recovery with gradual resolution of symptoms. In some children, the recovery period may last for months.

During a coughing spell, which can last for more than a minute, the child may turn red or purple. At the end of a spell, the child may make a characteristic whooping sound when breathing in or may vomit. Between spells, the child usually feels well.

Whooping cough can be prevented with the pertussis vaccine, which is part of the DTaP (diphtheria, tetanus, acellular pertussis) immunization. DTaP immunizations are routinely given in five doses before a child's sixth birthday. Whooping cough immunity can fade five to 10 years after the last vaccination. To give additional protection in case immunity fades, children ages 11-18 should get a booster shot (called Tdap). Adults should receive a Tdap booster shot as well. Boosters should be given to adults every 10 years, since whooping cough immunity can fade five to 10 years after the last vaccination. Pregnant Women are recommended to receive Tdap (whooping cough booster) in their third trimester (between 27-36 weeks of pregnancy, at the earliest opportunity during this window). Tdap is recommended during each pregnancy, even when given before pregnancy. The protection that expectant moms receive from Tdap also passes to their baby in the womb. This helps protect babies during the most vulnerable period, until they are old enough to get their first whooping cough vaccination at 6-8 weeks of Business & Service Directory age In conclusion, everyone should receive vaccinations for all diseases recommended by their physicians and Center for Disease Control. No Excuses!

Levine names Legal Aid of Sonoma County

Legal Aid of Sonoma County has provided services to Sonoma County's indigent population for over 50 years. Founded in 1958 and incorporated in 1983 as a private non-profit, Legal Aid provides crisis legal services to low-income families and children. Jones has gone for an off track excursion

Eric Jones has gone for an off track excursion and mowed the grass that is caught in his grill. June 21 to the 23 will see the star drivers of the Monster Energy Nascar Cup Series come to Sonoma Raceway for the 31st consecutive year. For the first time since 1997 the drivers will race on the full 12 turn 2.52-mile track using the famed downhill Carousel turn 6 for the scheduled 90 lap race. No Nascar Cup driver currently racing in the series has ever driven a Nascar Cup race car on the full course. Martin Truex Jr. won last year's race. This is the 50th anniversary of the opening of the track, then known as Sears Point Raceway and in celebration of that milestone in addition to the track changes for the Cup cars there will be activities throughout the weekend. The track has released a book chronicling the 50-year history of the track with photos of all the different types of racing that has taken place at the Sonoma County track.

confirmed that Cotati-Rohnert Park had selected a very fine candidate.

Just after 6:30 p.m. on June 11, school board president Leff Brown reported out Item 5A in one short sentence: "We did not reach agreement with our candidate for personal reasons."

Forty minutes later, with few reports and business as usual, the meeting adjourned.

Steve Goldstone and Dave Brown, Cosca Group consultants, have carefully steered the district through a process that allowed all stakeholders input into this most critical action. This followed Cosca Group's mission statement: "We involve district leadership in every phase and every key decision and provide continuous communication, frequent updates, and convenient access to consultants throughout the process." As these consultants have delivered on these promises during the past four months, they have earned the respect of the trustees and the community, so that an extended wait for the right superintendent becomes more than an act of faith.

Cosca Group and its two consultants who have led this search realize their task goes far beyond the duties of headhunters. Public education, the foundation of American values, relies on the participation of all community members. Cosca Group asserts its belief system just below its letterhead: "We believe that education is a cooperative effort of family, school, and community and that all children deserve the opportunity for success in schools."

To date, Goldstone and Brown have involved many stakeholders. In Feb. and Mar., they conducted 31 meetings and ran several polls to determine the needs of our community in a superintendent. With the board's input and direction based on all of this input, on Mar.26 they identified desired leadership qualities and characteristics. And from this information, the consultants put together a hiring brochure that the trustees approved at the beginning of April.

One conclusion based on the perception of the recent district leadership was that the district had poor communication, a failure of transparency, and policies that lacked inclusion of all of the community. This led to an identification of what was needed in a super-intendent.

The brochure's opening statement set the tone for the desired new leadership: "The Board of Trustees of the Cotati-Rohnert Park Unified School District seeks a long-term relationship with a collegial leader who can build on the district's strengths through the development of an effect governance team led by its Superintendent of Schools."

What does that look like? The eight past superintendents have each in his or her unique way maintained a distance from nearly all of the stakeholders. Most importantly, none of these superintendents were effective leaders of teachers and principals because they all distanced themselves from the realities of the classrooms and the campuses. They were content to hire consultants to lead trainings while they often stood aloof at the back of the training rooms. They rarely visited a campus long enough to get a feel for what was really happening.

What can be learned from looking at this history? A good superintendent will not just be available for teachers, principals and community members. A good superintendent will be engaged with all of the stakeholders in educational activities. A good superintendent will be a presence on the school campuses and accessible to everyone. A good superintendent will be a teacher, a mentor and a communicator.

Following eight figure heads who emphasized one feature or another but never actively participated in the educational process, superintendent number nine must be the leader that Cotati-Rohnert Park schools has been missing for forty years. A true leader will continue to teach, mentor and lead by example.

The weekend study of the prospective candidate highlighted just what a great superintendent will do: stand in front of employees and conduct the training, listen to employees needs and act upon

Sportsman's Report: Some upcoming events this month

The fifty-third annual Russian River Rodeo June 22 and 23. The event itself is fun for the whole family. Your support means this event will continue to offer an alternative to our young to the direction unwelcome. This is good, clean fun with all the glitz and glamour of cow-person events all over the country. Local youth put on the show, with barrel races, parades and cow poking. An adult ticket is only $10, seniors and kids only $5 and no family will be charged more than $30. Come and expose your kids to the agricultural roots of our western heritage. Visit their web site to buy tickets and check the schedule: http://russianriverrodeo.org check their Facebook page for updates and ways to help the Rodeo Queen get elected.

The famous Sturgeons Mill will be hosting their second of four weekends this Father's Day weekend. The steam up is at 10 a.m. with an earsplitting whistle. Your family will love checking out the old equipment and talking to the mill hands. The whole thing is set in a beautiful redwood grove nestled between Occidental Rd. and Graton Rd. near the town of Occidental. If you can't find either road you will have to be blinking too often to miss the signs. Drive time is forty minutes from downtown Cotati and the price is right, free! There is a great picnic area with summer fare for a fair price or you can pack a lunch. Docents will guide you on a tour and you can spend the rest of the day on your own. There is also a horsedrawn logging demonstration several times a day, a real hoot to watch those big draft horses work like well-behaved children. Very small kids love this demonstration. The steam whis tles are very, very loud, the mill has a few ear protection sets for use or bring your own, even big kids cry for their mama when the main mill and the donkey whistles go off at the same time. An official non-profit, the mill accepts donations and helps cover expenses through raffles and merchandise sales. Many folks come back several times to enjoy the old equipment and enjoy the heartfelt welcome.

One of the least known parks in the Bay Area is the Presidio Trust, this is the former military base that was on this site since there was a San Francisco. Only a forty-minute drive to the park free admission, free parking and a free shuttle makes this a real gem of an outing for local families. One of the coolest events, ongoing, is the digs. You can sign up to work a real archaeological dig in the park. There are tours, bike paths, hikes and museums all over the property. The kid friendly, docent led tours of the famous Fort Point under the south tower still guards the Golden Gate with cannon, ball and shot. The whole thing will take you years to discover. Visit them at: presidio.gov and add an events for what is happening when.

Later this summer is the Civil War re-enactment at Duncan Mills and events at Fort Ross which go on most weekends.

that information, mentor school leaders and always serve as an example of how they should conduct themselves.

The process to find the best superintendent seems slow but a wait for a "real" superintendent will not hurt as this community has been waiting for forty years. The good news is that the school board and the consultant team are committed to making the right choice. They have set their standards high because this community deserves a superintendent who is a teacher, a mentor and a leader.

"Nothing is ever lost," stated Governor Willie Stark in "All the King's Men" and repeated reporter Jack Burden. And that rings true in this superintendent search. The community did not get the excellent candidate from Temecula Valley but did learn more about what a great superintendent looks like. And now, more informed, the search continues.
